

June 5, 2018 - Flying Indiantown with a 9 year old Aviatrix

Miriam has a 9 year old grand niece for whom she occasionally cares... usually at the child's home. For the past two days she stayed with us and trying to find something that keeps a little one's interest up can be quite a challenge. However I have two things available that apparently was up to that challenge... a Vespa scooter and a Highlander airplane. This blog photo sheet is mainly for Bella Wiley and her family and certifies that she has, this date, checked out in both.

Our flight, this morning, was around the Indiantown area, including its citrus processing plant and FP&L solar power generating station, over our home in Tradition and then onto the St. Lucie Nuclear Power Plant, along the Atlantic coast beaches, down and around Stuart Witham Field Airport. We didn't have any luck in finding Bella's house in Hobe Sound since, from 1,500 feet we couldn't locate the Dunkin Donuts which is the landmark to her development complex.
